

CURRENT TREND: Higher REASON: Money continues to flow into grains; U.S. crop/Black Sea concerns remain

EXPORT SALES @ 7:30 AM TOMORROW, CFTC REPORTS @ 2:30 PM FRIDAY

MORNING TRIVIA: What is the only U.S. state formed by secession?

MARKET HEADLINES

- Quick Editorial: weaker crude oil overnight weighed on the grain markets only briefly at the evening open, as corn quickly led a recovery to reset move highs into this morning; fundamentals (or geopolitics, for that matter) haven't really changed this week but the funds seems willing to push values high, and there will be little to change overall momentum for the rest of this week or month unless something drastically changes on a war front.
- Taiwan's MFIG this morning issued an international tender for up to 65k tonnes of corn from either the U.S., S.A., or South Africa, closing tomorrow and seeking shipment from early November through early December.
- Private firm Agroconsult yesterday estimated 2026/27 Brazilian soybean planted area at 49.2 million hectares (121.6 mln ac), basically unchanged from last season due to higher input costs and tighter margins. Corn plantings were pegged at 23.3 mln ha (57.6 mln ac), up from 22.6 mln ha (55.8 mln ac) LY, despite fertilizer imports falling from 43.3 to 38.4 MMT in '26/27.
- The Buenos Aires Grains Exchange yesterday estimated 2026/27 Argentine corn plantings at 8.4 million hectares (20.8 million acres), also unchanged from last season's area.
- European Commission data showed cumulative U.S. soft wheat exports from July 1 through August 23 at 2.38 MMT, down 33% year-over-year; '26/27 corn imports of 2.57 MMT are up 44% YoY, with cumulative soybean imports of 1.71 MMT down 25% from this date a year ago.

WEATHER UPDATE

- Rains fell in the SW Plains yesterday with conditions mostly dry elsewhere; action mostly holds south over the next couple days with better chances re-emerging in the northern Plains and belt late Friday into the weekend. Extended maps continue to run wetter throughout, though the heaviest rains will hold north/northwest with the southern and southeastern belt generally a bit drier. Temperatures remain warm now edging up into the middle of September.
- Argentine rains remain generally confined to fringe crop areas over the next ten days, allowing dryness concerns to increase for the country's wheat areas.
- Brazil was dry over the past 24 hours but rains will start to slowly move in from southeastern crop areas through the weekend into the center-south for the 6-10 day time frame, aiding wheat moisture there but slowing some late safrinha corn harvest activates.
